

Skills Builder Framework

At Boots, we understand the importance of developing essential skills for individuals to thrive in education and set them up for success when transitioning into employment.

We also understand, that it's key for young people to clearly see common and simple language throughout the recruitment process e.g. in job adverts, at interview about what skills they have learnt and how they can put these into practice in the workplace.

The Skills Builder Partnership has produced the Skills Builder Framework. This framework is being used in many primary and secondary schools and colleges across the UK, providing toolkits, classroom resources, training and support to embed key essential skills.

At Boots, we are using the Skills Builder Framework to make things easier for young people during their recruitment journey with us, using simple language about the essential skills required for a role - language that they will be aware of from school/college and understand. Essential skills like; listening, problem solving, using your creativity and being a great team-player. This simple language will be in our job adverts, hints and tips for interviews or at the interview stage.

To find out more about please visit: www.skillsbuilder.org

